The French Club at La Salle University, Philadelphia invited their fellow students to a Cabaret Night. The event, part of the celebration for National French Week, was held at Backstage, a small, intimate cabaret-type setting that is reminiscent of the cabarets of Paris. French chanteuse Christiana Gallagher sang songs of Jacques Brel, Yves Montand, Jacques Prévert, and Georges Brassens. She provided the words so the students were able to join her. The French Club also offered refreshments to those who attended.

In addition to the Cabaret Night, the French Club promoted National French Week in a display on campus. The display featured the new AATF poster along with other pictures of France and Francophone countries. The French Club also had T-shirts made for the members. The front of the shirt identifies "La Salle University, Le Club Français," but the back of the shirt shows a large French flag with the words "Vive la France, On est les Meilleurs!" The students wear their T-shirts with pride. The French program at La Salle University continues to grow as more students choose French as their major field.
